This Spring, Tokyo Metropolitan Teien Art Museum will hold a grand reopening to mark the completion of largescale improvements. These projects have centred on maintenance of the European garden and the completion of a new restaurant building.

These facilities have been added to the Former Prince Asaka Residence, a designated Important Cultural Property which is already known for its verdant garden and Art Deco architecture, to further increase the enjoyment of our visitors.

To celebrate, Tokyo Metropolitan Teien Art Museum is simultaneously holding two exhibitions under the heading of “Art Deco Revival!”. “Walls that Talk: Stories from the Former Prince Asaka Residence” will be presented alongside “French Picture Books: Collection of Shigeru Kashima”. Walls that Talk: Stories from the Former Prince Asaka Residence

The construction of the former Asaka no Miya residence (now the Tokyo Metropolitan Teien Art Museum, an Important Cultural Property), was inspired by the Art Deco Exposition of 1925 which the Asaka no Miya visited while on a sojourn in Paris that year. Imprinted with the Imperial family's actions and thoughts, in the post-war period the residence was used as the official residence of Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida, who concluded the San Francisco Peace Treaty in 1951/2. As such, the site became the stage for many important affairs.

Even today, the histories and memories of visitors to this rare Art Deco building remain with us. Therefore, in this exhibition, together with objects from this museum's collections, memories from years gone by are gathered together in the living architecture of this building. In the context of the enduring appeal of the former Asaka residence, we focus on the activities of the former inhabitants of and visitors to this site.

Opening to the Public

The Tokyo Metropolitan Teien Art Museum holds an exhibition once a year to enable the public to fully appreciate the charm of the former Asaka no Miya residence, which was completed in 1933. In addition to introducing pieces from this museum's Art Deco collections, this exhibition will feature records and exhibits associated with the former Asaka no Miya. It aims to deepen our understanding of this architectural space and scenery, which is of worldwide value and significance.

French Picture Books: Collection of Shigeru Kashima

This exhibition represents the first public exhibition of picture books from the collection of Shigeru Kashima, a scholar of French literature. Children's books emerged in France in the middle of the 19th century. The editor Pierre-Jules Hetzel recognizing the talent of many authors and artists, gave life to literary masterpieces for children, such as Jules Verne's `Voyages Extraordinaires` series. Under the pseudonym P.-J. Stahl, Hetzel himself published the `Mademoiselle Lili` series of books, which were modelled on his own daughter. Accompanied by charming illustrations drawn by Laurenz Frœlich, they became extremely popular. From the end of the century until the Belle Époque, developments in colour lithography led to the production of picture books adorned with beautifully coloured illustrations. During the Golden Age of Art Deco, attractive and delicate illustrations by Maurice Boute de Monvel, modern picture books in the new Art Deco style by André Hellé, and work by the pioneer of cartoons and animation Benjamin Rabier, attained popularity.

The dawn of the 1930s saw the publication of picture books by Russian-born artist Natalie Parain and Jean de Brunhoff's world-famous `Histoire de Babar` series, which are amongst others that are still read to this day.

These works include a benevolent desire for the wholesome and healthy development of children as they grow up. Showcasing a world-class and valuable collection of picture books from the mid-19th century to the Art Deco period, this exhibition offers an introduction to the world of the Golden Age of French picture books.
